

CHAMPIONS' DAY AT THE GARDEN

Society Out in Force to See Prizes Awarded That Would Proclaim the Winners the Best Dogs in America.

HONORS FOR GLENDALE KING

Judges Decide He Is the Best Dog Born and Bred in the United States—T. W. Lawson's Entries Capture Many Winners.

It was champions' day at the Dog Show in Madison Square Garden to-day and the attendance was one of the largest of the week.

From early in the morning, when the judging began, until late at night the Garden was crowded with fashionably attired women and men.

T. W. Lawson, of Boston, was again in evidence during the day, entries from his kennel capturing some of the most coveted prizes.

One of the greatest honors of the day was won by Glendale King, belonging to W. C. Codman. He was awarded the silver medal for the best dog born and bred in the United States. The Clifton Challenge Cup, presented by R. S. McCrory, for the best bulldog, was won by Crossroads Romney Penfold, belonging to Mrs. Richard Harding Davis, wife of the novelist.

TOYLAND "BABES" AT THE ALMSHOUSE

Four Young Women of the Extravaganza Company Amused Aged Paupers in Blackwell's Island Home.

"COON" SONGS MAKE BIG HIT

Vesta Tilley Receives a Warm Welcome at the Murray Hill Theatre Where She Appears in Clever Songs and Impersonations.

Four members of the "Babes in Toyland" company went to the almshouse on Blackwell's Island yesterday afternoon, and for an hour entertained the inmates with songs, dances, recitations and instrumental music. They took life and cheer with them, and came away leaving many hearts less miserable than they had been for days.

Miss Mae Naudain, who is "Jack" when on the stage of the Majestic; Miss Irene Cromwell, the dainty little Miss Muffet; Miss Mary Welch, who is Sallie Waters, and Miss Ethel Ricketts, one of the skilful dancers of the Hamlin-Mitchell organization, comprised the party.

Supr. Roberts, of the almshouse, had been notified of the visit, and when the singers arrived there were fully one thousand of the inmates crowded into the plain wooden pews of the chapel. Men and women were about equally divided. Few of them were under fifty years of age, many were past seventy.

A score or more of the inmates had been led to their seats by their less afflicted associates. The faces of nearly all bore the stamp of sorrow and discouragement.

All stared when the four girls, not one out of her teens, entered the gloomy chapel. Their cheeks were red, and with the rouse they use to make themselves attractive at the theatre, but from the breezes that had caressed them as they crossed the East River on the little tug that plies between the foot of East Seventeenth street and Blackwell's Island.

Miss Welch began the concert with a piano solo. The music would have been better if the piano had been in tune, but no one minded that.

Miss Naudain sang a ballad, a simple melody, which went to the hearts of her listeners and left them quiet and thoughtful, too deeply appreciative to applaud until the fair singer had disappeared behind the curtain. Then there were cheers until Miss Naudain sang again.

Miss Cromwell followed with a monologue in which she narrated the troubles of a young girl who had been abandoned by her father and was now struggling to make her way in the world.

Then she sang a song about a young man who had been abandoned by his father and was now struggling to make his way in the world.

ELOPEMENT ENDS IN POLICE COURT

Girl's Father Arrested for Threatening to Shoot Her Betrothed—Runaways Then Married in Presence of Judge.

(Special to The Evening World.)

TRENTON, N. J., Nov. 6.—The elopement of a young Italian couple from New York to this city a few days ago ended in a fight, and later in a marriage in the city police station last night.

The eloping couple were Miss Louise J. Farni, aged twenty-two, of No. 2159 First avenue, and Frank Piro, aged twenty-one, of No. 117 Mulberry street, New York City.

Piro met Miss Farni several weeks ago and fell in love with her, and the couple agreed to get married. The fact was made known to the parents of the young couple and the youth's father was satisfied, but the girl's father informed her that he had a young man picked out for her, and that she must marry him.

Piro, 1, his sweetheart then eloped and came to this city. They went at once to the home of a friend. The fathers of the young couple appeared on the scene yesterday.

The girl's father was armed with a seven-shooter, and when he entered the house he threatened to shoot young Piro. The latter returned to the police, who put both parents under arrest.

All the parties interested in the case appeared before Judge Cook yesterday. Cook, accompanied by Rev. Vincent Sereni, pastor of the Italian Evangelical Church, Judge Cook asked the couple if they were satisfied to get married and they replied in the affirmative. The parents also were satisfied, and the ceremony proceeded.

The bride asked Judge Cook to take charge of her father, as he feared he would return to the house and start a fight, and he was taken back to a cell and told that he might go home this afternoon. Piro's father was discharged.
